A necessity

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER
The Importance of Worship
Lesson for July 26, 1981
Bible Study Passages: Deuteronomy 12:5-12; 14:27-29
Introduction

Worship is a necessity to one's beliefs and ethical/moral practices. A religion that totally emphasizes works is missing an important ingredient, namely, personal and corporate worship.

Worship is that moment in which the believer confronts and is confronted by the God who makes life possible. In our confrontations we are consoled and challenged, accepted and judged, carried and lifted up. Worship is also a time in which we gain insight for the facing of life and all its problems.

Unless we regularly "soak our souls" in some form of worship activity, we may easily dry up and lose our reason for being. Worship is a necessary factor for finding and experiencing meaning to life. This week we look briefly at the importance worship played in the lives of the Hebrew people.
True Worship vs. False [Deut. 12:1-4]

When the Hebrew people entered the land of Canaan, they encountered numerous other forms of idolatrous worship. Such worship of idols was quite common in that time. Thus, a temptations arose in which some of the people could easily worship the "tangible" gods of that land and culture.

It became extremely easy for the Israelite people to be seduced by the gods they encountered in the strange new culture. And through the centuries, it is easy in our day to be seduced by the numberless gods in our land, which can easily become our objects of worship.

God is jealous of those "gods" or "idols" we choose to worship. He was jealous of the gods which diverted the attention of the Israelites from the worship of him who had brought them from brutal slavery "to a land flowing with milk and honey."

A Place For Worship [Deut. 12:5-9]

Where we worship is not as important as that we worship. By this I mean that the edifice is not as crucial as our personal involvement in worship. The place we worship in, however, can enhance our worship experience. The music, prayers, sermons, symbols and fellowship with fellow believers can make worship meaningful.

The Israelites faced having to establish their worship center in a religiously plural society. It became important for them to establish a focal place of worship in order to distinguish themselves from the pagan worship going on around them. Thus, identity is important but it must not get in the way of meaningful relationships with Christians of other denominational ties.

The church, regardless of location, structure or identity, is to be a place where God in Christ is exalted in worship, a place where people share of themselves and their worldly goods, a place where people can serve and be served, a place where people come together to eat, fellowship, and enjoy one another as brothers and sisters of the same Christ.
Worship To Be Joyful [Deut. 12:10-12; 14:27-29]

The Israelites put a lot of joy in their worship, and, in return, they received the gift of joy. Worship is meant to be a joyful occasion as God's people come together to celebrate life in Christ. Worship is not to be a solemn experience, but an occasion to give thanks to God for his gifts of life, of freedom, of homes, freedom and salvation in Christ. Worship should be designed so that people come away feeling blessed, not blessed out. They should leave feeling a sense of gratitude and love for God. Such worship enables persons to grow in their knowledge and love of God.

Choirs hear 'tall' folklore

By FRANCES H. PAULETTE

Dressed in bib overalls, chambey shirt and coonskin cap, speaker Jerry held his audience spellbound as he spun tall tales that had their origin in the Southern Applachian Mountains.

Dr. Gwynn W. Ramsey of Oak Grove Farm, Forest, made folk tales 'come alive' for members and families of the Adult and Crusader Choirs of the Red Oak Baptist Church at an area lake on Saturday evening.

Dr. Ramsey is Professor of Biology and Curator of the Herbarium at Lynchburg College; he has taught there for fifteen years. His research interest is in Ecological-Floristics and Virginia Flora, topics on which he has a number of publications.

When Dr. Ramsey, a North Carolina hillbilly, a heritage of which he is very proud, puts on his overalls, work shirt and coonskin cap, his character seems to change...he becomes Master Storyteller.

Story telling as an art comes naturally to Dr. Ramsey who heard his first tales from his grandmother when he was only a small child living in the foothills of North Carolina's Blue Ridge Mountains.

From his love of folk tales has developed the avocation of 'Tale Tellin'. Taking on the characteristics of a mountaineer's manner of speaking, dressed as a mountain man, he begins to spin his tales....Jack Tales, Fool Irishman Tales, Jump Tales, Ancient Tales, Tall Tales, Nature Poetry and even Riddles.

As part of his regular teaching procedure, Dr. Ramsey's classroom vocabulary necessarily includes such terms as "Rubus Occidentalis" and "Aminathemum Muscetoxicum" but when he becomes "Teller of Tall Tales", he, deliberately, begins to sound like an unlettered mountain man.

Story telling is, indeed, an art, employing the use of the hands, body, eyes, voice, and facial expressions. Dr. Ramsey uses all of these to make his tales 'come alive.'

Many of his listeners have heard his voice take on the quality of such thunderous depth that it actually became frightening. In other parts of the same tale, it might be necessary to speak in a soft and mellow voice to get across a given point.

The tales he tells span many years and his performance of these folk tales is so remarkable that audiences sit spell-bound for hours listening to his narration. When he speaks before church, school or civic groups, he often has five hours of materials so he won't run out of interesting material.

Dr. Ramsey is deeply concerned about world ecology.

"There's a old saying," he once remarked, "that for every error that man makes concerning environment, nature will extract a penalty either now or in the future. Lots of mistakes are being made." So, one might ask, isn't something being done?

Pulling a rumpled bill from his wallet, the "Teller of Folk Tales" and Lynchburg college Professor remarks, "Because the eagle on the dollar that lives in the wallet has a louder scream than the one that perches on the cliff."

Dr. Ramsey.....a teller of tall tales.

The Pastor Speaks

By DANIEL W. MENSER
GOD'S DOOR IS OPEN
Hebrews 10:15-22 - "Let us draw near with a sincere heart in full assurances of faith, having our hearts sprinkled clean from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water." Verse 22.

When a seventeen-year-old girl came for some counsel and guidance, she seemed overburdened by guilt. She was pretty and popular but had allowed her relationship with one particular guy to get out of hand. She had prayed about it, yet she felt no peace. She had asked the Lord to forgive her, yet she had not forgiven herself. She had not accepted the beauty of God's forgiveness. Verse 17 of today's scripture passage says, "And their sins and their lawness deeds I will remember no more."

Satan would like nothing better than for you to continue to punish yourself for past mistakes. For then it is impossible for you to be an effective tool for the Lord. You will lose your confidence and boldness; you will fail to be a witness at all. Satan would love to mess up your inflicting self punishment.

Ask the Lord to show you past sins and mistakes where you have not accepted his forgiveness. Confess your wrong attitude to him and ask him to give you a fresh, clean start.

Daniel W. Menser is pastor of Central and Hollywood Baptist Churches, in Appomattox.

RBM to conduct school

The Rural Bible Mission of Kalamazoo, Mich., will conduct a vacation Bible School at Bethel Bible Church on Linden Street in Appomattox from July 27-31, from 9 a.m. to noon daily.
